Why Speculators Are Frantically Buying This $1 Stock

Published May 17, 2013 by Anthony Scopel

For the past year there has been a shale oil revolution raging across the Midwestern United States.

But in no place is it more fervent than Kansas where experts believe a different type of shale called “Mississippi Lime Shale” could be inordinately profitable to investors.

In times of old, investors would rush to the town of an oil or gold mining boom and buy joint ownership in claims or even form haphazard investment pools. Nowadays the stock market allows passive investors to exploit an oil boom without ever leaving their home.

In this special report I'll be looking at Northumberland Resources, Inc. trading under the symbol “NHUR”. NHUR is a burgeoning over-the-counter stock fully exploiting the boom in Kansas.

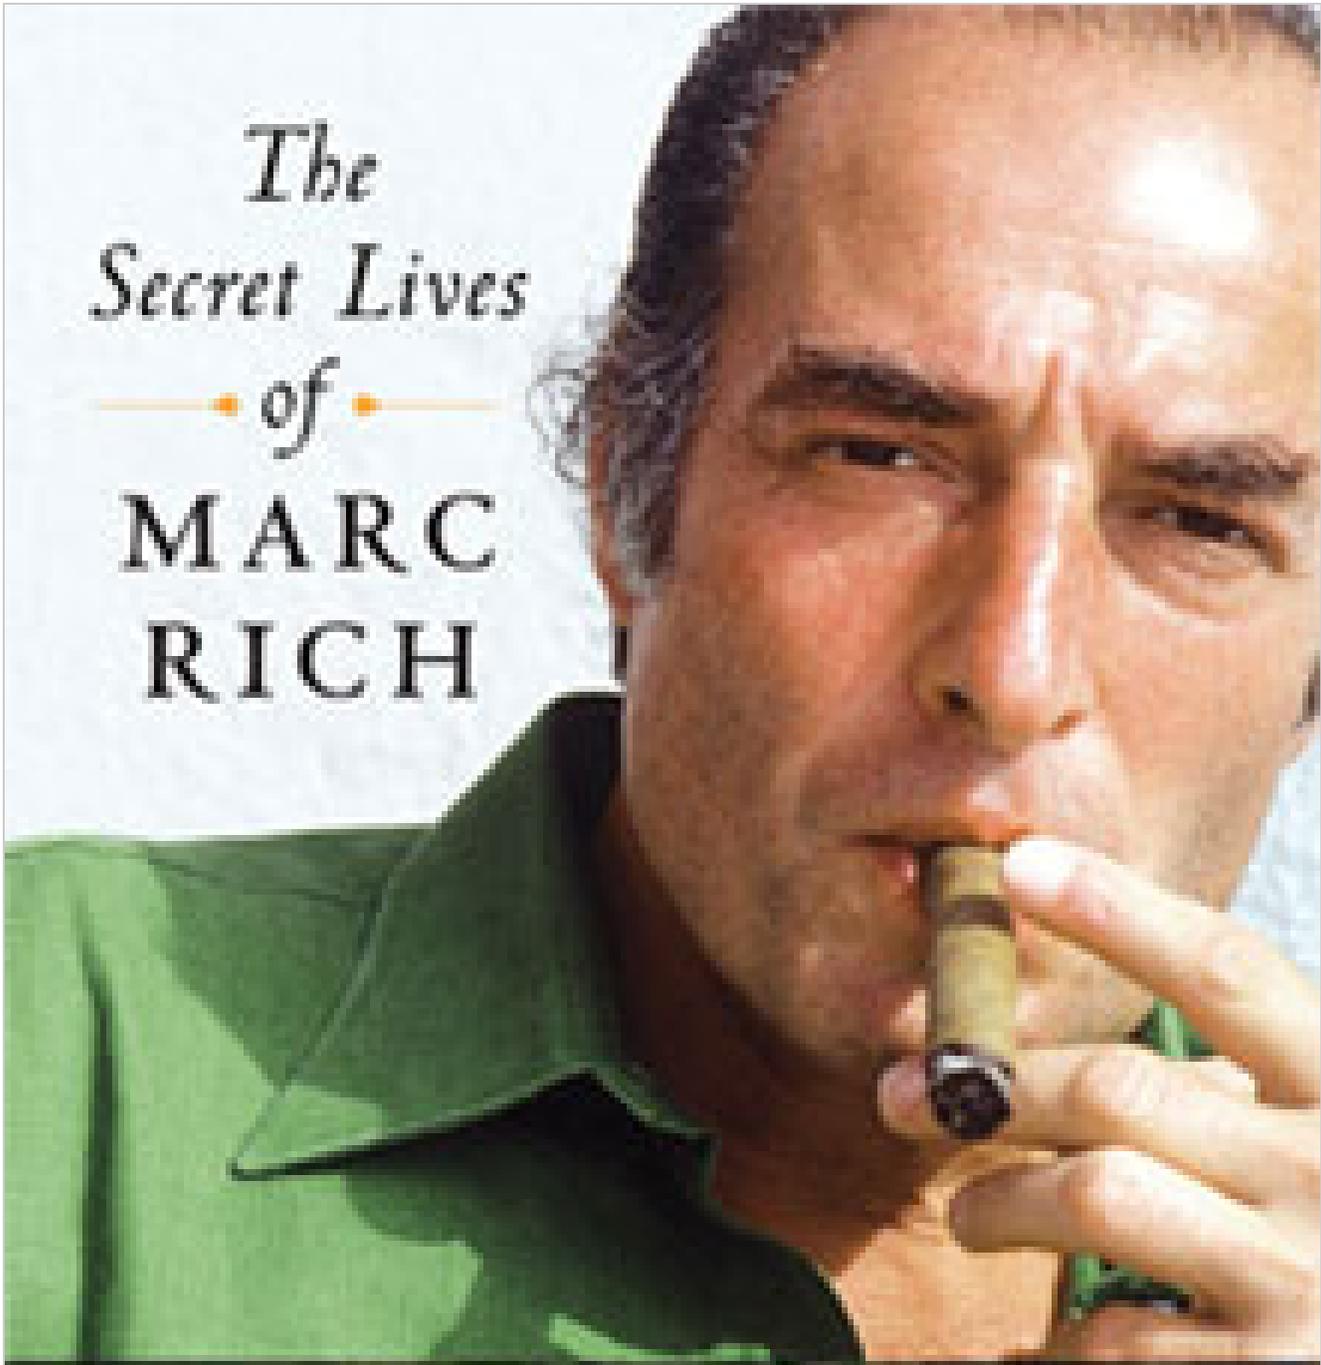

Investment Highlights:

- Northumberland Resources, Inc. (OTCBB: NHUR) – 52 week range: $0.24 – $1.03
- NHUR is exploiting the Kansas oil boom and growing at a breakneck 739%
- NHUR is the only pure play stock we could find that is 100% focused on the Mississippi Lime shale play.
- NHUR is one of the best positioned junior miners in Kansas with 33 oil wells and 2,160 acres of leaseholds.
- NHUR has risen from $0.24 to $1.03 over the past month because it is one of the best ways for passive investors to gain exposure to the Kansas oil boom.

Over the past month NHUR has more than doubled in price. I believe this is because NHUR is one of the only pure-play junior mining companies exploiting the Mississippi Lime shale boom.

Why The United States Is Experiencing A Shale Oil Revolution:

For many years America has been dependent on the Middle East for oil. For obvious reasons this has been a major concern of the US government. If ever there was a conflict between the US and Middle East countries, the spigot could be turned off and America would grind to a stunning halt.

But over the past two years, there has been something of a revolution in the oil industry.

You' see America in fact sits on an astonishing 1.5 trillion barrels of oil – or more than five times the stated reserves of Saudi Arabia and almost 300 trillion cubic feet of natural gas. The problem for the US was that their oil & gas is in a geological formation that made it very costly to extract.

So costly in fact, that just a few years ago the cost of extracting a barrel of US oil was higher than the cost of importing a barrel of Saudi oil. This meant that the astonishing US oil & gas reserves weren't even counted by economists in worldwide energy statistics.

The

But then two things happened:

1. A new drilling technology called "Hydraulic Fracturing" was developed that allows US oil and gas to be recovered at an economically feasible cost.

2. The price of oil rose so high (over $70/barrel) that using this new technology “hydraulic fracturing” or “fracking” for short; it actually became hugely profitable to extract and sell US shale oil and gas.

You may remember the price of oil reached $140 a few years ago. It then reversed course and hasn't seen those heights again. Why? The US shale oil boom started and America was no longer held hostage by OPEC.

On the backdrop of the shale oil revolution Goldman Sachs recently predicted that in just five years, the United States will surpass Saudi Arabia and Russia as the largest oil producer in the world.

What Is Mississippi Lime? And Why Are Investors So Excited?

The story of the Mississippi Lime starts back in 1903, when Frank and L.E. Phillips began searching for oil in Oklahoma. It took them a couple of years, but once they hit their first well in 1905, they proceeded to drill another 80 wells in a row without a miss. Not a dry hole in the bunch. Soon, Phillips Petroleum, now ConocoPhillips, was born.

The area produced oil for an astounding 50 years with traditional vertical wells and made many an oilman, and more than a few investors, wealthy beyond the dreams of avarice.

Alas, all good things must come to an end and eventually the flow of oil slowed to a trickle and oil companies moved on to greener pastures.

They knew they were leaving millions of barrels of oil behind, trapped in the limestone, but they had no way of getting at it with the technology of the day, so they bid the Mississippi Lime a fond farewell.

Fast-forward to 2012. Horizontal drilling and fracking – technologies originally developed to extract oil and gas from shale – are being used to unlock millions, and perhaps even billions, of barrels of oil hidden away in the Mississippi Lime.

You've no doubt heard of fracking, or hydraulic fracturing. It's a remarkable process that injects water, sand and chemicals underground at high pressure to fracture the rock or shale that surrounds and traps large deposits of oil and natural gas. The process releases the oil and gas into the well so it can be tapped.

Technological advancements also now allow for horizontal drilling. This is a big advancement over traditional vertical drilling, because it can be used to access deposits that lie under difficult or impossible-to-drill rock formations, as well as formations discovered underwater or under existing towns or cities.

The combination of these two technologies has opened up a number of new oil fields in the U.S. – fields so large that they could turn the United States into an oil-producing colossus on the scale of Saudi Arabia.

No wonder the International Energy Agency came out with a report just a few weeks back predicting that the United States will pass Saudi Arabia and Russia to become the world's #1 oil producer by 2020!

That's How Profound These New Discoveries Are

In recent years, the Bakken Shale has gotten most of the attention from investors, but the easy money has already been made. That's why I believe the Mississippi Lime will be the next big millionaire maker, for investors who jump on board now.

One of the great things about the Mississippi Lime is that it costs far less – and is much easier – to fracture limestone than shale.

Tapping into just one Bakken shale deposit can cost a company $6 million to $7 million, which puts a big strain on the resources of a small player.

However, the Mississippi Lime can be tapped for roughly $2.5 million, according to the American Association of Petroleum Geologists. And that's to put in a well that can produce, on average, 400,000 barrels of oil a year.

Drilling the Mississippi Lime is cheaper for three reasons. First of all, the limestone is much closer to the surface than shale: 4,000 to 6,000 feet, as opposed to 8,000 to 12,000.

Second, limestone is more porous than shale, which means it can be cracked under lower pressure. This allows companies to use much smaller, and cheaper, drilling rigs.

Kansas Is At The Center Of An Old Fashioned Oil Boom

At the center of the Mississippi Lime oil boom is Kansas.

Less than a year ago land leases in Kansas could be picked up at $15 to $20 an acre. Now, the lease values have skyrocketed into the thousands. Many Kansas landowners have already become millionaires.

"Kansas has been invaded by horizontal drilling people," Kansas lease buyer Fred Hambright told ABC News. "Some people have really hit it big. We've seen leases go as high as $1,700 an acre."

Yep, the Mississippi Lime formation is ground zero in a gold-rush style oil boom.

See for yourself the effect the boom is having on Kansas residents:

Oil Boom Fueling Fortunes in Kansas

Why Mississippi Lime Could Be More Profitable Than Shale!

As Hart Energy's Richard Mason first brought to our attention last year, the life cycle for all major shale plays follows the same path: discovery....optimization....harvest.

The Mississippi Lime play is still in the “discovery” phase. On the other hand the Bakken Shale and Eagle Ford Shale are in the harvesting stage.

Early investors in the Bakken Shale, Eagle Ford Shale and other shale deposits have made gigantic stock market returns:

$10,000 Invested In Mangum Resources Turned Into A $328,000 Profit!

In March 2009, investors in a little-known company called Mangum Resources were trading shares at 25¢. Exactly two years later, their shares traded at $8.56.

For those lucky enough to have gotten in early, the value of Mangum shares soared 3,380% in just 24 months!

A fluke? Not by a long shot. Mangum is just the first in a string of big winners from the American oil rush.

I was so amazed I compiled a list of oil and gas companies that have exploded in price (All are listed on US or Canadian stock exchanges).

Like the preceding example, profit calculations are made for a $10,000 initial stock buy from each stock’s low to subsequent high and by subtracting the initial investment from the high valuation.

2) March 2009, Rosetta Resources traded $4.06. By April this year, it traded at $47.82 for a gain of 1,178%

... Rosetta paid $107,800 profit!

3) May 2009, Primary Petroleum traded for just 4¢. By the end of last year, they traded at 92¢ for a gain of 2,330%

... Primary paid $223,000 profit!

4) March 2009, Northern Oil and Gas traded at $2.22. By March 2011 it was at $32.69 for a gain of 1,472%

... Northern paid $137,200 profit!

5) January 2009, Abraxas Petroleum traded at 65¢. By the end of February this year, it traded at $5.87 for a gain of 903%

... Abraxas paid $80,300 profit!

6) May 2010, Argosy Petroleum also traded at 65¢. Less than a year later, it traded at $3.40 for a gain of 523%

... Argosy paid $42,300 profit!

7) January 2009, Wild Stream Exploration traded at $4.34. By April 2011, shares had risen to $12.41 for a gain of 286%

... Wild Stream paid $18,600 profit!

8) August 2007, TriStar Energy traded at $3.90. This April, it closed at $16.73 for a gain of 385%

... TriStar paid $28,500 profit!

9) March 2009, Whiting Petroleum traded at $10.06. By April 2011, it was selling at $74.26 for a gain of 738%

... Whiting paid $67,380 profit!

10) December 2008, Continental Resources sold for $13.54. This April its price was up to $71.95 for a gain of 531%

... Continental paid $43,100 profit!

11) March 2009, Brigham Exploration sold for $1.14. This April it traded at $37.15 for a gain of 3,359%

... Brigham paid $325,900 profit!

Eleven Stocks, All Junior Oil & Gas Plays

With An AVERAGE Overall Gain Of 1,371%

The money being made here is unbelievable. If a stock brings in 300% to 400% profit... then you find it at the bottom of the winners list.

There is an ocean of oil buried in the Mississippi Lime, a 17 million acre limestone formation that sits 4,000 to 5,000 feet beneath Southern Kansas and Northern Oklahoma.

The 300- to 1,000-foot thick layers of limestone are rich in oil and natural gas that was formerly completely inaccessible. Now, thanks to breakthroughs in horizontal drilling and hydraulic, oil companies can finally bring these rich deposits to the surface.

As I mentioned, some experts believe the Mississippi Lime could turn out to be the largest source of domestic oil since the Bakken Fields of North Dakota began producing 12 years ago.

Many of those experts believe it could actually be bigger than Bakken – potentially reaching 15 billion barrels of oil in all. As one oil company CEO put it, “It’s a monster.”

One expert expects the Mississippi Lime to produce 18 million barrels a month by 2020 – that’s a 414% increase over the 3.5 million it’s producing today.

But whether the Mississippi Lime is bigger than Bakken or not, for my money, it’s the hottest oil play in North America right now – especially for investors and traders who want to get in on the ground floor of an explosive new opportunity that will build many a fortune.

NHUR is the ONLY Pure Play Bet on Mississippi Lime

After researching how investors could get exposure to the raging Kansas oil boom, I came to a startling conclusion:

Northumberland Resources a thinly traded penny stock is the only pure play junior I could find exploiting the Mississippi Lime boom.

Over the past month the price of NHUR common stock has more than doubled – I believe precisely for this reason.

I believe as investors rush to gain exposure to the next big shale play, more and more buying will flow to this thinly traded penny stock. A surplus of buying over selling can only lead to one thing; a higher price.

All Of This Makes NHUR The Perfect Vehicle For Speculators:

NHUR is a thinly traded penny stock leveraged to a huge US oil boom. Not only that NHUR is the “only shop in town” for investors who want a pure-play bet on the Kansas oil boom.

Please Note: I cannot guarantee when you look at NHUR next week, it will be at the same price. Why?

NHUR has already more than doubled in the past month. As more and more money flows into this tiny penny stock it could push the price higher and higher. I don’t think it’s irrational to expect similar price action to what we have recently seen in Bitcoin.

As such I cannot recommend this stock to neophytes. NHUR is a speculative stock that should only be bought by experienced traders.

Editors Note: We have received many questions and comments asking how to invest in stocks and shares. To buy and sell stocks you'll need a brokerage account, we have compiled a PDF list of the best and most trusted online brokers. Click Here to Download the PDF

Also note when buying shares there is no minimum. It is possible to buy a single share or 100,000 shares. Most online brokers will be happy to assist you in the process.

I've been in the markets just over 33 years now investing and trading and will do some DD on this one but I do know as a rule of thumb on a penny stock, get in on first news while it is low at 20 cents or up to 40 cents and get out at 60 cents or little lower and find the next and repeat. I've almost always done that other than Apple bought couple bucks a share and few others that I thought would go to $20 but never dreamed they would go as high as they did and of course did not hold that high but back in Apple again at the low etc..

Penny stocks can make you or break you so be skilled and my only advice is to do them on paper first and has you learn, put money in you can afford to lose and if you come out with 100-1000% great and then do it again.

Mark

April 30, 2013 at 4:34 am

One other thing: If you use Microsoft window on your pc etc., go to SEC filings on any stock and click CTRL and F to pop up key word search and type in word "going" because you always want to look for something that says "going concern" which is an alarm bell. Take this company for example; zero cash per share and look at the book value, cash on hand and debt. I've not done full research yet to see if something of a development could change the going concern problem but SEC filing shows going concern and that means could go bankrupt unless of a catalyst thus; to just buy and hold for me would never happen. I would have been in near the low and out at 0.60 and onto the next stock which is what I do all the time but missed this one for one that was 0.0044 and sold at 0.0087 and it went to a penny but I did just fine as usual.

Again, I've not done extensive DD on this stock so it might be wonder stock for all I know but at this point seeing going concern along with price action already, I will pass for now after a fast check just now but will hang out around here for one that goes up at a dime and has not yet gone up much and sell 300% and get out.

I purchased a penny stock @ 19 cents and it went to .42 and even a little higher my experience is trying to sell it is practically impossible because there are not enough buyers on the trading table compared to blue-chips which sell almost instantly. I'm no expert but that was my experience until the stock went to 0$ about 4 yrs later. open to any thoughts would like to learn, wondering where I might of gone wrong in trying to sell it. I had 40,000 shares.

Me too!

I believe you can make it big with penny stocks if you find the right one to buy. I tried this 8 years ago and lost money instead of making money for the obvious reasons.

So, please send me some info on it...thanks!

I think a great way to learn about investing is going on the vanguard.com site and reading some of their articles and listening to videos. Also you can open a brokerage account with them to buy and sell stocks, very easy, and they have a flat 7$ fee. They also have very many good mutual funds so if you don't know much about investing you can have someone else manage your money very well, and they have returns from 2-20% interest a year.

i have a great interest in these type of companys. i have been investing in esph (echosphere) a company that has clean water tecnology in fracking of rock for oil. i am now looking into this co that you have mentioned. fracking for oil is expenceive and lucritive if the strike. so i hope nhur does well for there investors. and yes look at the fine print. even as a adwersment you have to find out some how.

Looks like a marketing trick to get people to put aside the fact that this type of oils is deadly to the environment and therefore to all of us.

If it's too good to be true....

all this will make other people very very rich not the people buying penny shares. lol

May 15, 2013 at 8:26 pm

Written with a marketing tone it does not miss the fact that fracking is expected to be a profitable industry here in the states. What worries is that it is based on the fear that middle east oil will not be available in the future. This fear grows more legitimate with every incident and war in the region. However, the region finances much of this strife on the selling of the oil – and other commodities – to the western nations. Still a gamble as all things are, but looking better and better.

if only it was not so harmful to the environment.

A fool and his money are soon parted..... be wary. Anything that sounds too good to be true.....IS.

I am skeptical about the many so-called investment opportunities available nowadays. Most of these are scams. They all are designed to first get their hands on innocent opportunists' money and what is further following is difficult to operate procedures, or additionally required other steps, which also needs to be paid for. I am really tired of this dishonesty, which is time consuming and costly, designed to rip peace-loving and honest people who want to earn something, additional to what their sweat for, each day of their lives!!!!
